Embassy's deputy chief of mission visits Lajes

SSgt. Rosaire Bushey
Editor

Less than a week after the visit to Lajes by First Lady Hillary Clinton another distinguished visitor stopped by to view operations by the U.S. Forces Azores, 65th Air Base Wing and tenant components of Team Lajes.

Gregory Mattson, deputy chief of mission at the U.S. embassy in Lisbon made a two day trip to the base to become familiar with operations here.

"This is the first time I've really visited the base," Mattson said. "The only other time I was here was 33 years ago when in the Navy I was travelling space-available and stopped for lunch. I don't count that."

Mattson said this trip has his mind made up that it won't take that long for him to visit again. "The first thing I was struck with was that Lajes is much bigger than I anticipated," he said. "The other two things that really stood out for me were the facilities and the people."

Mattson said the Lajes facilities, especially quality of life facilities such as the fitness and community centers and child development center, are very impressive. "After looking around at some of what you have available here, I'm envious," he said.

The deputy chief of mission also said he had a chance to meet 20 or 30 people during his visits around the base and that he was tremendously impressed with the levels of enthusiasm he saw. "It's not just enthusiasm for the mission, it's also the positive attitude people show toward their fellow workers."

Mattson said he and the ambassador understand some of the challenges associated with being at a remote location - such as the television issues which are being worked. "We appreciate what's being done here and recognize fully that this (Lajes) is the most important aspect of the bilateral relationship. Everything that is done here in support of that is of tremendous importance to us in Lisbon."

"Everyone here has a positive attitude about the care you're taking to have good relations with the local Portuguese population and with being good citizens of Terceira and the Azores."

Dental hours expanded

The 65th Medical Group Dental Flight has implemented new duty hours. Effective immediately, appointments will be available weekdays from 7 a.m. to 5 p.m. Dental sick call is at 7 a.m. and 12:30 p.m. weekdays. Patients are asked to call Ext. 23139, if possible, before attending sick call.

By the end of August the dental clinic will fully staffed with four general dentists, according to Lt. Col. (Dr.) Mullen O. Coover, director of dental services. "When we are fully staffed, the temporary limitations on non-active duty care should be greatly eased and non-active annual exams and cleanings will soon be done during the same appointment, just as we have been doing for active duty members," he said.

"While we strive to provide a reasonable mix of services based on funding and staffing, we realize improvement is always possible," he said. "People with comments, questions, concerns, or suggestions, should call the clinic at Ext. 25248 or 23236."

Radio station boosts output

SSgt. Rosaire Bushey
Editor

There's a new alternative in town but it's in a familiar place - on your radio dial at 96.1 FM.

Detachment 6 of the Air Force Broadcasting Service has instituted a new lineup for their FM radio broadcasts which doubles the amount of time listeners get the local Lajes flavor.

According to station planners the new format, which adds an additional show to the lineup, will not only help internal continuity, but also provide more flexibility for getting out local information.

"When things happen during the day we want to get the news out to folks as quickly as possible," said TSgt. Jordana Jacobs, operations manager. "With local shows we can add news quickly and help keep the community informed."

Jacobs said the new format also helps keep staff who might normally only work on the television side of AFBS, to get some radio experience.

The shows will feature mainly adult contemporary, alternative and 'hot' music on the current charts. The shows are from 6 to 10 a.m. with 'Dr. Mag'; from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. with Amy Schleper's 'Guru Cafe' and from 2 to 6 p.m. with former TV8 anchor Sheila Kowalewski.

Jacobs also said that only the morning show would air the first Friday of each month.

Mountain Home B-1s make Lajes temporary home for Northern Viking '97

SSgt. Rosaire Bushey
Editor

For the more than 140 men and women who call themselves the Gunfighters, Lajes is perhaps more like the wild west than their home station at Mt. Home AFB, Idaho. Wild or not, however, the deployment is offering them a chance to hone their skills like never before.

"This is the first time the 34th as a unit has been able to deploy as a full package to a forward operating location," said Capt. Gregg Stone, a B-1 weapons systems and project officer for the deployment.

As part of the U.S. forces participating in Exercise Northern Viking '97, Stone said the B-1s will be playing the role of the aggressor, trying to invade Icelandic space to attack shipping.

"We're going to be teamed with some B-52s, Dutch F-16s and other aircraft to help achieve our objective," Stone said. "We'll also be acting as the threat that the Icelandic Defense Forces want to stop and to that end they'll be sending their F-15s and other aircraft to intercept us."

To make that mission move, the 34th brought with them six aircraft, two KC-135 tankers for refueling duties and spare parts in numbers that would normally allow two aircraft to operate at a deployed location.

"We're very excited about demonstrating our ability to take a package forward with the equipment normally used to support two aircraft and support six," he said. "We have an objective to meet 100 percent of our on target times and we expect to do so."

Helping the Gunfighters along the way are the men, women and services of Lajes Field. "Ever since the advance team arrived about a week ago we've had nothing but people here bending over backwards to help us," Stone said.

Col. Jose Antonio Guerreiro Sola da Cruz, Portuguese Air Base No. 4 Commander, gets fitted for a helmet and oxygen mask by SSgt. Ebby Bryce, life support craftsman on deployment with the 366th Air Expeditionary Wing's 34th Bomb Squadron.

"From communications fixing us up with local area network support, to the operations support squadron and billeting, everything has gone as smoothly as we could have ever hoped."

Sick call uniform for on duty members

I disagree with the medical group's policy of military members being required to be in uniform to go to sick call. In all the years I've been in the service, this is the first location I've been that requires members to be in uniform for sick call. Whether an individual eventually ends up at work on a day is the call of the supervisor and/or the commander, not the medical staff. While the clinic will make a recommendation, the final call is with the supervisor or commander. If the uniform is mandatory for sick call, let's make it mandatory if someone needs help at the personnel flight or the finance office.

Traditionally, military sick call was established as a formal walk-in medical appointment to provide active-duty members priority of care. This formation is used to determine fitness for duty at the beginning of the work day and to minimize time away from the duty station if the active-duty member is cleared by the physician. When a member is on duty they should wear the appropriate uniform. When members are on leave or off duty I agree that a military uniform or appropriate civilian attire is fine. In the future we will not turn any active-duty member away (whether in civilian or military clothes) who is seeking medical service during sick call. Thanks for the input.

101 Critical Days

Last will, testament of a safety unbeliever

Courtesy
Wing safety office

Because I think safety is a lot of bunk and because I deliberately choose to ignore my own safety and good sense..

I hereby certify that I prefer:

- Seeing eye dogs to safety glasses
- Silence to ear plugs
- Brain damage to hard hats
- Lung damage to respirators and filters
- Club feet to safety shoes
- Missing fingers to saw guards
- Broken limbs and back to safety belts and nets
- Death and disability to common sense

I further state that I would rather:

- Fall than use ladders safely
- Burn rather than exercise care with flammable materials
- Lose a limb rather than un-

plug tools before trying repairs

I have also decided I can do without the following:

- Limbs
- Eyes
- Ears
- Life

Because I know my actions affect others, I have:

- Assured my family they won't miss me
- Found someone to keep my family safe and financially secure when I'm gone
- Assured my family that my being crippled won't be a hardship to them
- Selected my favorite hospital and burial plot
- Made arrangements for all expenses

Because no one can persuade me that being safe is better, I do hereby execute this document and waive all my rights to a long, happy, fruitful and productive life.

AMSS outlasts OSS in a 17-11 softball slugfest

AMSS's Mark Hamrick turns third after pounding out a homerun during his teams' 17-11 win over OSS.

Karen Edge
Volunteer staff writer

The 629th Air Mobility Support Squadron fought the 65th Operations Support Squadron for their 17-11 victory, Monday night at the 7:50 p.m. intramural softball game at Ocean View Park.

It was a battle of the bats as OSS's Chris Nick faced off with AMSS's Mark Hamrick to see who would pound out the most home runs and bring their team to victory.

Nick opened up the first inning for OSS by scoring Al Kingsley and Scott Thompson with his three run shot over the right-field fence. But, AMSS's Hamrick wasn't just hammering home runs -- he brought the top of the first inning to a close with a diving catch, snagged Jim Larson's would be base hit, and threw out Quinton Owens to wrap up the top of the inning with OSS leading by three.

However, the AMSS crew wasted no time scoring four runs in the bottom of the first, bringing the score to 4-3.

The two teams juggled the lead back and forth and finally tied it up at 9 in the third inning. It looked like OSS would take the lead in the top of the fourth inning, with Nick's in the park homer off AMSS's Chris Gullottas's knee, and the score was 11-9.

AMSS countered with two runs followed by a three run homer by Ray James to jump back into the lead, 14-11.

Lead in hand, AMSS was able to keep tight reigns on their opponents and made the top of the fifth a three up three down inning and then go on to score three more runs in the bottom of the fifth ensuring their 17-11 victory.

Chief of Staff Fogleman requests retirement

The Secretary of the Air Force on Monday received the request of Air Force Chief of Staff Gen. Ronald Fogleman, to retire from active duty effective Sept. 1. Secretary Sheila Widnall stated that it is with regret that she is forwarding Fogleman's request to the Secretary of Defense.

Fogleman has served with enormous distinction as Chief of Staff of the Air Force since October 1994. His service as Chief of Staff capped 34 years of service to this nation as a military officer, leader and combat warrior. His life has been dedicated to the core values of integrity, service before self and excellence in all we do.

As Chief of Staff, he accomplished what he set out to do. Recognizing the need for a stabilized post Cold War force, he began to take care of the troops and their families and to set a course for modernization. He inspired a visionary strategy of Global Engagement for the Air Force. While Global Engagement provided overall direction, Fogleman made this vision a reality through his strong commitment to a long range plan. This commitment helped launch the Air Force on an evolutionary path to becoming a space and air force.

Secretary Widnall stated, "I know that I speak for the men and women of the entire United States Air Force as I thank both General Fogleman and Miss Jane for their many years of faithful and dedicated service. General Fogleman leaves as his legacy the greatest Air and Space Force in the world. He will be greatly missed." (Courtesy Air Combat Command)

Benken: Quality of life issues will remain a top priority

SrA. Cortchie Welch
35th Fighter Wing Public Affairs

MISAWA AIR BASE, Japan (AFNS) — The Air Force's highest ranking enlisted member outlined what he considers major concerns during his visit here July 23 to 24.

CMSgt. of the Air Force Eric Benken said today's enlisted members are concerned with several issues, but the prime issue is change.

"We've always been in a constant state of change," he said. "Change is OK. Change is something we have to adapt to."

In the near future, technology will help define "who we are and what we are," and what the Air Force will be in the next century, he said.

"People will have to be flexible in their career fields, and I think the Air Force will be an exciting place to be in the next century," the chief said. "People will continue to have great careers in the Air Force and the aerospace force as we evolve into that entity.

"I think that our leadership, as we go into the next century, will have to understand that they will be managing available resources."

There will be challenges to face on the way, he said. "They (leaders) will be managing resources facing a constrained budget. We'll have to look at modernization and outsourcing and privatization. We need to step up to the challenge in those managing programs, instead of looking at it as something we need to be afraid of. I think it's something we need to embrace and something we need to work very hard at."

Benken said he thinks the impact of the Quadrennial Defense Review won't be as devastating as people may expect.

"The QDR is protracted out to the year 2003," he said. "The QDR has to go through two more levels of review before it's implemented."

One thing for certain is quality of life issues will remain a top priority during the QDR process, Benken said. The Air Force will continue to pursue the "1-plus-1" dormitory plan, improve family housing and pay and benefit compensation, expand community services for youths and add child development centers.

"Those programs will always remain on the scope," he said.

Technology conference set for Sept. 8 through 12

MAXWELL AFB, GUNTER AN-NEX, Ala. — Senior military and civilian officials in the computer industry will be the keynote speakers for this year's Air Force Information Technology Conference, sponsored by the Headquarters Standard Systems Group and set for Sept. 8 through 12 in the Montgomery Civic Center. The keynote speakers will include: John Chambers, Cisco Systems president and chief executive officer; Steve Ballmer, Microsoft, senior executive vice president; Duane Zitzner, Hewlett Packard vice president and general manager; Lt. Gen. Ronald Kadish, Electronic Systems Center Commander; Lt. Gen. William Donahue, Headquarters Air Force deputy chief of staff for Communications and Information; Maj. Gen. John Woodward Jr., Headquarters North American Aerospace Defense Command director of command control systems and U.S. Space Command director of communications and information at Headquarters Air Force Space Command; and Robert Frye, SSG's executive director.

"We will have an all star cast of keynote speakers with more than 150 in-depth technical seminars and workshops," said 1st Lt. Scott Sweat, AFITC chairman. "There will be a vendor exhibition floor with more than 110 companies showcasing the latest technology, making the 1997 AFITC a fantastic conference for the projected 4,000 attendees."

"AFITC is designed with Air Force and Department of Defense computer users, developers, and managers in mind because they establish and outline the specifics for tomorrow's information technology resources," said Sweat.

Conference enrollment is free and this year's theme is: "Achieving Information Superiority." For more information, visit the SSG home page at <http://www.ssg.gunter.af.mil>.

Waterfest - Wet, wild summer fun

Nancy Billings
65th Services Division

Hopefully some sun, but plenty of fun! That's what's in store during Waterfest '97.

Waterfest is an annual event sponsored by outdoor recreation. This year's event is Saturday at Praia Beach from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Some of the activities include: Water skiing, wakeboarding, kneeboarding, banana sled rides, boat rides around the bay, horseback rides, youth snorkeling treasure hunt, teen inflatable raft relay, food and game booths and a home-made boat regatta.

"The boat regatta is the biggest event of the day," said Victor Silva, Lajes Outdoor Recreation director. "Any squadron or private organization is eligible to participate in the race. The boats can be made out of anything as long as it's man-powered. Last year, we even had a boat made out of a portable potty.

"As of July 31, we have 13 teams signed up for the race," explained Silva. "Anyone interested in joining the race should sign up by today."

Horseback rides are a new event this year. The rides are located near the volleyball court, across the street from the beach. They are free.

A team from last year's regatta didn't make it far before the men started abandoning ship.

For those who wish to hear some tunes while lounging on the beach, the local band "Coxe" will play from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Officials at outdoor recreation are also renting motor boats, sail boats, kayaks and windsurfers, however, a certification card must be presented in order to rent the equipment. Individuals can get a certification card by taking classes offered at outdoor rec.

Paddle boats are also available and certification is not needed to rent them.

For more information about Waterfest '97, call ODR at Ext. 24140.

Waterfest schedule Saturday - Praia Beach

10 a.m. - Beach activities open to include boat rental, skiing, kneeboarding, wake boarding, tubing and banana sled rides.

11 a.m. - Booths open - Food, games, horseback rides and the band "Coxe"

Noon - Slingshot water balloon competition, youth snorkeling treasure hunt for all ages.

1 p.m. - Home made boat regatta.

2:30 p.m. - Teen inflatable raft relay race

3:30 p.m. - Regatta awards ceremony

5 p.m. - Booth and beach activities close

Shuttle Service

The 65th Transportation Squadron will provide shuttle service for people wishing to attend Waterfest '97 activities at the beach. The shuttle leaves the family support center and the beach every half hour from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.
